

New HMC director will assist refugees

Meral Kesebi has been appointed managing director of the Halton Multicultural Council.

A graduate of Dalhousie University, Kesebi has worked in social planning and research in Halton and has extensive experience working with ethnocultural groups.

Kesebi will be responsible for administration of the council's programs and services, as well as management of its financial responsibilities and delivery of the advocacy/consultation mandate of the council.

Founded in 1979, the Halton Multicultural Council is a community agency promoting intercultural understanding throughout the community by educating the public on subjects like cultures, traditions and values of different ethnic groups. It also assists immigrants and refugees in settling and integrating in Canada.

The council has established a free English as a Second Language program and provides volunteer translators and interpreters to various community agencies, school boards and government organizations.

Council headquarters are at 635 Fourth Line, Unit 48, in Oakville.
